

Calm Down with Charlie: Learning to Share

Today, I went to preschool with my favorite toy car.

I felt happy because I wanted to play with it all day.

My friend Charlie saw my car and wanted to play too.

I felt a little worried because I didn't want to share.

Charlie asked politely if he could have a turn.

I thought about how nice it feels when someone shares with me.

I decided to let Charlie play with my car for a little while.

Watching Charlie play, I felt a little nervous.

But then, I saw Charlie smiling and having fun.

I felt happy, knowing I made Charlie smile.

Charlie gave the car back to me after his turn.

I felt proud because I tried sharing,
and it was okay.

Charlie said, "Thank you for sharing with me."

I felt warm inside, knowing I did something kind.

Sharing made playtime more fun for both of us.

Sharing is a Joyful Journey.

Next time, I will remember that sharing can be nice.
