

Making Friends at Preschool

I went to preschool today. I saw my friends playing. I wanted to play too.

I felt a little shy. My heart was beating fast. I took a big breath.

I walked over to them. I stood quietly and watched. They were building with blocks.

I wanted to join. I asked, "Can I play too?" My voice was soft.

One friend looked up. She smiled at me. She nodded her head.

I felt happy inside. I sat down next to them. I picked up a block.

I waited my turn. I watched them build.
I listened to their ideas.

Then it was my turn. I added a block.
My friends watched me.

They said, "Good job!" I felt proud. My heart felt warm.

We kept building together. I shared my blocks. We made a tall tower.

Friends Together

I felt like a part of the group. We were all smiling. It was fun.

Later, a new friend came. She wanted to play too. She asked, "Can I join?"

We nodded and smiled. We made space for her. She picked up a block.

We all played together. We took turns nicely. We shared our toys.

I felt happy and proud. I made new friends today. We all had fun.

Making friends felt good. I can ask to play. I can share and take turns.
